

Patricia G. Garcia is vice president of Contracts for the Intelligence and Information Systems business of Raytheon Company.

Garcia is responsible for the leadership, strategic direction and performance of the Contracts organization as well as assuring customer satisfaction through balanced, equitable business agreements.

Garcia has over twenty-four years of experience within government and commercial contracting with the last twenty years at Raytheon Company.

Before assuming this position, Garcia was the director of Contracts for Integrated Communications Systems of Raytheon Network Centric Systems. Integrated Communications Systems provides end-to-end communications systems solutions.

Prior to this role, Garcia was the senior contracts manager for the Surface Combat organization within the

Biography

Tactical Systems division in McKinney, Texas. Surface Combat's core business represented ground electro-optical sensor systems.

Garcia has managed U.S. and international contracts for development, production and services. In 1984, she worked in acquisitions at the Robins Air Force Logistics Command Center. In this position, she obtained extensive training in government procurement and acquisitions. Garcia received a Certificate of Appointment as a Contracting Officer in July 1987.

Garcia received a master's degree in business administration and a bachelor's degree in business administration from Georgia College. Garcia has continued to complete an extensive learning curriculum directly related to acquisitions and leadership programs. Garcia is a qualified Raytheon Six Sigma™ Specialist. Garcia was born in Macon, Georgia.