

David C. Wajsgras is senior vice president and chief financial officer of Raytheon Company. He has held this position since March 2006 and is a member of Raytheon's senior leadership team where he directs Raytheon's overall financial strategy. Raytheon Company (NYSE: RTN), with 2011 sales of $25 billion, is a technology and innovation leader specializing in defense, homeland security and other government markets throughout the world. With headquarters in Waltham, Mass., Raytheon employs 71,000 people worldwide.

Wajsgras provides extensive financial and operational expertise. His responsibilities include financial reporting and controls, merger and acquisition activity, planning and analysis, investor relations, tax and treasury. He is also the Executive Champion of Raytheon's Persons with Disabilities (RPDA) Employee Resource Group, an organization that works as a strategic partner across the company to facilitate a fully accessible and supportive workplace for employees with disabilities.

Biography

Prior to joining Raytheon, Wajsgras was executive vice president and chief financial officer of Lear Corporation. He joined Lear in 1999 as vice president-controller, where he was responsible for all of Lear's accounting and financial reporting functions. In addition to his financial responsibilities, Wajsgras had strategic and operations oversight of Lear's Interior Systems Division.

Before joining Lear, Wajsgras was corporate controller for Engelhard Corporation. He also held numerous financial management positions with Honeywell International, Inc.

Wajsgras earned his bachelor's degree in accounting from the University of Maryland in College Park and has a Master's degree of Business Administration from American University. He is a member of the Kogod Advisory Council, Kogod School of Business, at American University in Washington, DC. He is a member of the Board of Trustees for Roger Williams University in Bristol, RI. He is also a member of the Financial Executives Institute.