Anthony “Toby” O’Brien is vice president and chief financial officer (CFO) of Raytheon Company. He is a member of Raytheon’s senior leadership team, where he directs the company’s overall financial strategy. Raytheon Company (NYSE: RTN), with 2019 sales of $29 billion and 70,000 employees, is a technology and innovation leader specializing in defense, civil government and cybersecurity solutions. Raytheon is headquartered in Waltham, Massachusetts.

On Sept. 12, 2019, it was announced that O’Brien will assume the position of CFO of Raytheon Technologies Corporation, which will be formed upon the closing of the proposed merger of Raytheon Company and United Technologies. The closing is expected in the first half of 2020.

O’Brien provides extensive financial and operational expertise. His responsibilities include financial reporting and controls, merger and acquisition activity, planning and analysis, investor relations, tax and treasury.

Prior to his current position, O’Brien was vice president of finance and chief financial officer for Raytheon Integrated Defense Systems. He has also served as Raytheon vice president of finance, and was the senior finance executive responsible for Raytheon Airline Aviation Services and Raytheon’s International Landed Companies. He also provided operational finance support to Raytheon’s businesses.

O’Brien also served as vice president and CFO of Raytheon Aircraft from 2002 to 2006 and as vice president and CFO at Raytheon Aircraft Integration from 2000 to 2002.

O’Brien joined Raytheon’s Finance Leadership Development Program in 1986 after receiving a bachelor’s degree from Boston College. Upon completion of the program, he held numerous finance positions of increasing responsibility with several of Raytheon’s businesses.
