Our Code and our terms and conditions with domestic and international suppliers, require compliance with all applicable government laws, rules and regulations (including laws prohibiting human trafficking and forced labour). Raytheon Systems Limited employment policies

Employee Conduct: Our Code makes clear to employees the actions and behaviour expected of them when representing the Company. The Company strives to maintain the highest standards of employee conduct and ethical behaviour. Specifically, employees are encouraged to report any concerns related to the direct activities or the supply chains of the organisation. This includes any circumstances that may give rise to an enhanced risk of slavery or human trafficking. A dedicated helpline has been set up to deal with such reports, guaranteeing anonymity where required.

Contractor Process: We use only specified, reputable employment agencies to source labour and always verifies the practices of any new agency before accepting workers from that agency.

Supply Chain Due Diligence Policies

Raytheon Systems Limited uses existing processes to identify and mitigate risks at various stages of the supply chain process and will use continuous improvement techniques to further strengthen this regime.

Requirement and Supplier Identification

- Where possible, we re-use trusted suppliers who have already undergone due diligence

Supplier Assessment and Selection

- We assess all new key suppliers using the tailorable Raytheon Enterprise Supplier Assessment (RESA) tool and maintain records of the results. Supplier procedures for combating slavery and human trafficking in their supply chains will be assessed as part of this process dependent on the risk category of the purchases concerned.
- All potential suppliers from high risk countries are screened for compliance with anti-bribery legislation by a dedicated International Supply Chain function. These assessments do not deal with Modern Slavery per se, but companies who can demonstrate a good track record on these issues may be considered low risk due to their demonstration of an ethical stance.

Contracting with Suppliers

- We contract with all suppliers on the basis of compliance with all local laws.

Management of Suppliers

- Raytheon Systems Limited monitors supplier performance of their obligations based on risk and value criteria.
- REAs are repeated on a regular basis, depending on the type, regularity and value of goods and services provided.
- For high value subcontracts, dedicated resource is applied to manage supplier performance. As well as assessing progress on contractual deliverables these resources ensure that the suppliers are performing work in compliance with contractual and legal requirements. This is achieved by regular on site visits, which concentrate amongst other things on the Health & Safety aspects of how the work is being performed. This is particularly important for non UK/US/Western European suppliers.

Supply Chain Risk Assessment

We have conducted a risk analysis of our supply chains in terms of Slavery and Human Trafficking based on the commodities purchased and the geographic location of the suppliers involved.

Purchases of components and services from UK and European markets or from elements of our US parent company or shared US based suppliers are considered to be low risk.

Higher risks exist when major subcontracts are let for the design, development and delivery of entire products and systems, since these involve more complex multi-level supply chains with large quantities of component parts and raw materials. The majority of such assemblies are sourced from UK, US and Western European companies but, for certain projects, they are procured from indigenous sources where risks are considered higher and where oversight is increased as detailed above.

Higher risk also exists in the sub tiers of some purchased products such as workwear, promotional goods and COTS IT hardware where material may be sourced from, or manufacture may take place in, developing countries. Similarly, raw material elements of products such as machining and electronic components are considered higher risk, since they have long supply chains with less transparency to the purchaser. Where these risks exist, first tier suppliers are expected to manage lower tier supplier obligations. We also champion some multi-tier activities such as identification and elimination of conflict materials.

Effectiveness in Combating Slavery and Human Trafficking

We use the following mechanisms to measure how effective we have been in ensuring that slavery and human trafficking is not taking place in any part of our business or supply chains:

- Completion of internal and supply chain assessments
- Use of labour monitoring and payroll systems
- Personal contact with the next link in the supply chain for high risk purchases to ensure their understanding of, and compliance with, our expectations.

Training

During 2017 the business will at a minimum conduct an awareness session for the Leadership Team and all Supply Chain and Human Resources Staff which will explain:

- The requirements of the Act and the commitments in the RSL statement
- What to look for when assessing and managing a supplier
- What to look for when employing new people
- Some common potential mitigation actions
- What to do when a potential violation is discovered
